

Over the course of his 12 year career in the 50's and 60's Don Mossi won over 100 games, mostly in relief, had an ERA under 3.50, and struck out almost three times as many as he walked- not bad, very good in fact. This, of course is not what he is most known for. Nicknamed "The Vulture, and "The Sphinx", he must also have been blessed with a resilient and forgiving demeanor because there is no way he didn't hear comments about his radar dish sized ears coming at him from opposing dugouts. Who knows what he heard that we can't! One thing for sure, the comments decreased as batters trudged back to their benches having been unable to solve his nasty stuff.
